We're Changing the Future of Arthritis Together

Thank you for making a gift commemorating 75 years of progress at the Arthritis Foundation. Our work today and beyond focuses on accelerating scientific research, breaking down barriers in health care and expanding patient education opportunities — as we continue our commitment to help people with arthritis and their loved ones navigate their own unique journeys. As always, we are grateful for your support.

Dr. Lindsey has registered

Lindsey Albenberg, DO, is an Assistant Professor of Pediatrics at the Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania and an attending physician in the Division of Gastroenterology, Hepatology and Nutrition at The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia. She is the program director for the Fellowship in Advanced Inflammatory Bowel Disease and her clinical practice focuses on dietary therapies for IBD. Dr. Albenberg is a researcher within the Center for Pediatric Inflammatory Bowel Disease at CHOP. One of her key research interests is the response of the gut microbiota to dietary modification in inflammatory bowel disease. Dr. Albenberg has contributed to the literature in several areas related to the gut microbiota in health and disease including work examining how the host and the microbiota interact to maintain a dynamic oxygen equilibrium in the gut, work describing the fungal gut microbiota in inflammatory bowel disease, and work describing the relationship between diet, the microbiota, and inflammatory bowel disease. She has a special interest in training the next generation of IBD researchers and has mentored numerous medical students, residents, and fellows.
